

One day while visiting an enchanted forest Hansel and Gretel accidentally separated.

As the night approached, Hansel and Gretel independently decided on writing each other distress letters. Both children were accompanied by their trustworthy typewriters.

“Dear Gretel, I am lost in this enchanted forest. I am resting by a quiet river and shall patiently await your response.”

After preparing his letter and magically sealing it, Hansel called upon the forest life. A crow, a hare, and an ebony raven soon approached. The crow silently flew off with a copy of the letter. The raven soared high atop the forest in search of the closest school. The hare darted off into the night searching for the nearest friend.

After some time, Gretel also called upon the forest life.
Several nocturnal creatures appeared. After some discussions, a course was reached. One animal drafted towards the home of the two siblings. Another was to visit all of the nearby schools.

After some more time, an owl appeared with Hansel's letter. Quickly, Gretel prepared a response. She appealed to the great owl to deliver copies of her letter as she embarked on the journey to reunite with her brother.
